Lost.

What! lost your temper, did you say: Well, dear, I wouldn't mind it, It isn't such a dreadful loss— Pray do not try to find it.

'Twas not the gentlest, sweetest one, As all can well remember Who have endured its every whim From New Year's till December.

It drove the dimples all away, And wrinkled up your forchead, And changed a pretty, smiling face To one-well, simply horrid.

It put to flight the cheery words, The laughter, and the singing; And clouds upon a shining sky It would persist in bringing.

And it is gone! Then do, my dear,
Make it your best endeavor
To quickly find a better one,
And lose it—never, never!

HEART AND WILL.

By WILLIAM JAMES LINTON.

William James Linton was born in London in 1812; died in New Haven in 1898. He was noted as a man of letters, a wood engraver and a political agitator. He wrote a history of wood engraving in America. He was in the van as a radical in English, Ilish and Italian struggles.

Robert Blake was next to Nelson, the greatest of English admirals. Officer Cromwell, after the death of Charles I., ruled England as Lord Protector until 1858.

Milton was one of the greatest of English poets. His portrait, autograph and biographical sketch, with a selection from his works, have already been printed in this series.

Sir John Ellot, for denouncing the king's tyranny, was imprisened in the tower of London, where he died in 1632.

John Hampden was asroclated with Ellot. He was prosecuted for opposition to John Charles I., took arms against that monarch, was wounded in battle and died of his wounds in 1643.

> UR England's heart is sound as oak; Our English will is firm: And through our actions Freedom spoke In history's proudest term: When Blake was lord from shore to shore, And Cromwell ruled the land, And Milton's words were shields of power To stay the oppressor's hand.

Our England's heart is yet as sound, As firm our English will; And tyrants, be they cowled or crowned, Shall find us fearless still. And though our Vane be in his tomb, Though Hampden's blood is cold, Their spirits live to lead our doom

Our England's heart is stout as oak; Our English will as brave As when indignant Freedom spoke From Eliot's prison grave; And closing yet again with Wrong, A world in arms shall see Our England foremost of the strong And first among the free.
